VuBotics, Inc. Announces Release of Harbinger Research Report on Company

ATLANTA, Aug. 1, 2006 (PRIMEZONE) -- VuBotics (OTCBB:VBTC) announces the release by Harbinger Research, a leading New York Independent Investment Research Company, of its Investment Report on VuBotics: The Future of Reading and Online Advertising Metrics, by Senior Research Analyst, Andrew S. Hua, CFA. The Report features an in-depth review of VuBotics, their breakthrough technology, initial products like VuIT(tm) for Blackberry(tm) and more recent developments. In the report, Hua provides a detailed commentary on the investment opportunities within this dynamic technology company.

VuBotics, Inc. (VuBotics) is an emerging technology company that has developed a unique software application, VuIT(tm), which alters the way content, and particularly text, is delivered to the user on an electronic display. The VuIT(tm) product family uses an advanced proprietary algorithm that dynamically delivers text sequentially onto a viewing screen, word-by-word, rather than as static text across a screen, as with a piece of paper. The words are typically displayed one at a time, as large as desired, and at a rate of speed optimized for the reader. This approach is combined with a cadenced delivery that is designed to mimic sub-vocalization, based on an in-depth understanding of readers' lexicons, including language and culture. This is achieved by analyzing cadence values to the content, thereby delivering content at high speeds with comprehension and recognition characteristics.

VuBotics President & CEO, Richard L. Teters, says, "VuIT(tm) brings new meaning to streaming... particularly to mobile devices which are inherently hard to read. With VuIT(tm) technology, 'no screen is too small'." He continues, "With our VuIT(tm): Text Bigger, Text Faster technology, we are changing the Word... Actually changing the World. People will no longer 'read' text; they will 'VuIT(tm)'."
