Yara strengthens its position in Denmark

Oslo (2004-04-27): Yara is strengthening its position in Denmark by establishing a new joint venture, Ferti Supply I/S, together with two Danish companies; Dansk Landbrugs Grovvarereselskap (DLG) and Agro Danmark. The new company will import, distribute and sell mineral fertilizer in the Danish market. Yara will own 50% of the shares, whereas DLG will hold 40% and Agro Danmark 10%.

Ferti Supply will purchase mineral fertilizer from Yara and SweDane Fertilizer, a company partly owned by DLG, and distribute the material for resale to DLG, Agro Danmark and other retail outlets in the Danish market.

The new company is an important step in Yara's strategy to increase the cooperation with local partners for the distribution of mineral fertilizer building on the company's Key Account concept. The new joint venture will further improve the cost efficiency of selling and distributing mineral fertilizer in Denmark.

Ferti Supply is expected to sell approximately 550,000 tonnes of fertilizer per year, representing annual revenues of approximately DKK 700 million.

The establishment of the new company is dependent upon approval by the EU's competition authorities. The company is expected to be operational from second half of 2005.
