FX Energy Reports Initial Results of Sroda-5 Well

Salt Lake City, January 5, 2006 - FX Energy, Inc. (Nasdaq: FXEN) reported today that a drill stem test on the Sroda-5 well in western Poland in a sixteen meter section of the Rotliegend target reservoir tested gas and brine in a short test early today. The well will continue to be tested and additional drilling will take place before commerciality of the well can be determined.

"Logging of the well will determine the overall thickness of the pay zone in this well," said David Pierce, president of FX Energy. "While we are disappointed that the well did not test gas in the quantities we had hoped, we are pleased that the well confirms that gas is being trapped here and we remain positive about the Sroda area," continued Mr. Pierce.

The Company also reported that the Drozdowice well is expected to spud later in January.

About FX Energy

FX Energy, Inc. is a technology-driven E&P company, with a large land position, very large low-cost reserve potential, an active drilling program and financial strength to fund current exploration. The Company holds exploration rights to over 1.7 million acres in western Poland's Permian Basin. The Permian Basin's gas-bearing Rotliegend sandstone is a direct analog to the Southern Gas Basin offshore England, and represents a largely untapped source of potentially significant gas reserves. FX Energy is exploiting this untapped potential in the belief that it can create substantial growth in oil and gas reserves and cash flows for its stockholders. The Company trades on the Nasdaq National Market under the symbol FXEN.
